

Introduction to The Attachment Research Community (ARC)

The Attachment research community (ARC) supports schools and settings to develop best attachment and trauma aware practises. ARC is a charitable organisation set up in 2017, with a mission to support all schools to be attachment and trauma aware by 2025.

Why join ARC?

Becoming a member of ARC will open up professional and educational pathways within a membership platform with readily available resources, regional workshops, panel discussions and virtual events that allow our members to network and support each other. As well regional events, members will benefit from priority booking and discounted fees for ARC's annual conference, which over previous years has successfully hosted 2000+ delegates and showcased a list of renowned keynote speakers such as Paul Dix, Prof. Barry Carpenter, Prof. Janet Rose and Kim Goulding.

Our Approach

The ARC supports the development of best attachment and trauma aware practice in education in order to benefit everyone's mental health and well-being. ARC supports members to develop and embed their practice.

Our Trustees

The ARC was founded by Virtual Heads and Academics who saw how attachment and trauma aware approaches made a difference to young people and adults in schools and settings.

Become a Member

By joining The ARC you will become part of a growing community of schools, settings and many more who are all committed to developing best practice by sharing their learning about attachment and trauma.

Member benefits include: National annual conference, regional workshops and member resources.
