

The Perry Way

The north Telford footpath/cycleway links Wellington and Donnington. The Perry Way provides a direct, traffic free route between residential and industrial areas suitable for commuting and leisure journeys.

The route follows the Shropshire Union Railway for 2½ miles. The Railway was opened in 1849 and ran from Wellington to Stafford.

The Perry Way is named in memory of a keen local cyclist and was opened by the Mayor of Telford & Wrekin in April 2004.

Stephen was a passionate believer in the need for a sustainable transport system. He campaigned for more than 20 years in the Telford area for improved cycle provision and against a car based transport policy.

He was a founding member of Telford Friends of the Earth and was co-ordinator of the group.
